Some key highlights.....

- More homes sold in the 2nd Quarter (46) than in the 1st Quarter (16). About the same as Q2 2025 (41).
- 22 homes had 27 price reductions averaging -5.8%
- 57 New Listings compared to 54 same period last year
- 46 Units Pending compared to 49 same period last year.

What does all of this mean? The 2nd Quarter continued to show a healthy market, with sales rebounding from the slower first quarter and closely matching last year's pace. Inventory continued to increase, giving buyers more choices while overall market conditions still favored sellers. The biggest shift was in buyer behavior. Well-priced, well-prepared homes continued to attract strong interest and move quickly, while homes perceived as overpriced often required price reductions and still struggled to generate offers. This trend was evident across several price ranges, including below $1 million, where increased inventory has created more competition than many sellers would expect. Overall, buyers remain active but are taking a disciplined approach, carefully weighing price, condition, and value before making decisions. The takeaway for sellers remains consistent: today's market still rewards thoughtful preparation, strategic pricing, and strong marketing. Homes that enter the market positioned correctly continue to achieve the best results, while ambitious pricing is being met with increased resistance.
